science, and statements of mystic philosophers were quoted without naming the authors. Only in the notes given at the end of the article were the sources of the quotations and the names of the authors mentioned. Without looking into these notes, it is difficult to distinguish between the statements made by scientists and those made by spiritual men. In other words, there was marked similarity between the statements of scientists and the statements of the Anubhavis. People interested in this field should read the book by Dr. Capra.

Eight years before Einstein published his Theory of Relativity, Swami Vivekananda had said, while replying to a reception given to him at Kumbhakonam after he had returned from the Chicago Parliament of Religions in which he had participated on behalf of India:

“The other great idea that the world wants from us today, the thinking part of Europe, nay, the whole world—more, perhaps, the lower classes than the higher, more the masses than the cultured, more the ignorant than the educated, more the weak than the strong—is that eternal grand idea of the spiritual oneness of the whole universe. I need not tell you today, men from Madras University, how the modern researches of the West have demonstrated through physical means the oneness and the solidarity of the whole universe; how, physically speaking, you and I, the sun, moon, and stars are but little waves or wavelets in the midst of an infinite ocean of matter; how
